Many organizations - from hospitals to financial services - think that the key to performance improvement is to dig deeper into their quantitative data until they find the key to success. At SunStone, nobody has more appreciation for that type of data than we do, but this is only part of the answer.

We believe the real answer is to couple the quantitative data with a balanced look at the qualitative data and to find a meaningful way to incorporate it into the total picture of business performance.

At SunStone, we understand an integrative approach to medicine must include both traditional Western medicine along with world medicine for a truly all-encompassing approach to patient care.

It is this creative, inventive thinking that we bring to all our clients, backed by years of experience in pinpointing areas where operations can be improved, and suggesting simple ways to implement consistent innovation, realize sustainable development, and enjoy financial growth.

What is Integrative Medicine?

- The patient and practitioner are partners in the healing process.
- All factors that influence health, wellness and disease are taken into consideration — including body, mind, spirit and community.
- Providers use all healing sciences to facilitate the body’s innate healing response.
- Effective interventions that are natural and less invasive are used whenever possible.
- Good medicine is based in good science. It is inquiry-driven and open to new paradigms.
- Alongside the concept of treatment, the broader concepts of health promotion and the prevention of illness are paramount.
- The care is personalized to best address the individual’s unique conditions, needs and circumstances.
- Practitioners of integrative medicine exemplify its principles and commit themselves to self-exploration and self-development
